ANCIENT WISDOM + MODERN FORMULATIONS + BRITISH MADE

The Founders
Anita & Bittu Kaushal

"In Mauli, we honor our daughters' wishes and rich ancestorial heritage by distilling the beauty of Ayurveda into meaningful products for mindful living. In 2012, our daughter passed away from a brain tumor. Her dream was to help others feel connected and confident in living.

Ayurveda runs through our heritage. My father-in-law was a renowned Ayurvedic Doctor; my mother was an herbalist, my grandmother was a midwife, and my grandfather was a farmer of plant medicine. We are native Brits of Indian origin and share a passion for the power of holistic remedies from skincare to digestion, to our human need for connection."

AYURVEDIC HERITAGE + SOUTH ASIAN FOUNDERS

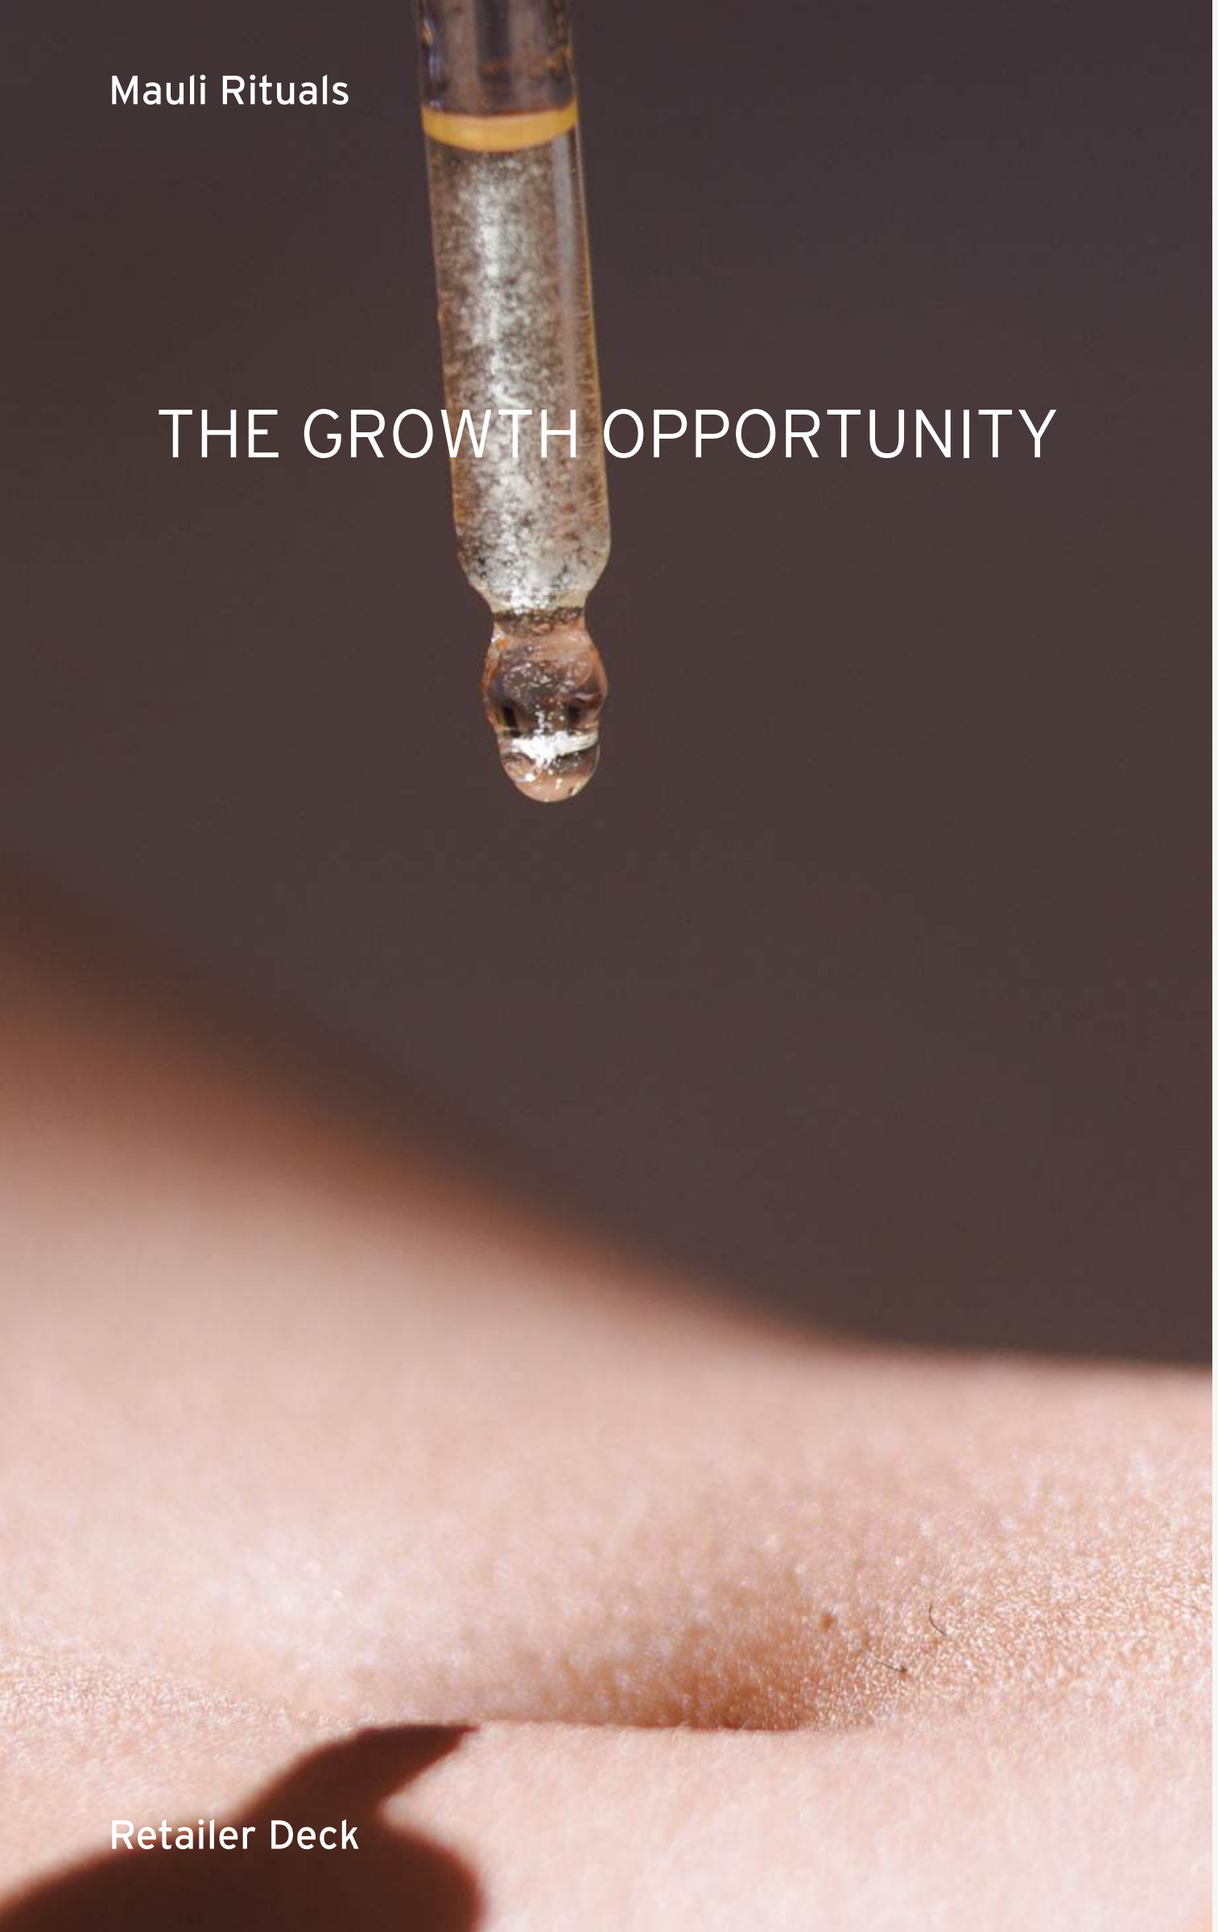

WHY NOW?

The world is changing.
Consumers are no longer simply buying beauty products.
They are investing in longevity, resilience and preventative wellbeing.
Nervous system health demand for sleep and stress solutions is growing globally.
Ayurvedic wisdom allign perfectly with modern consumer needs.

For more than a decade, Mauli Rituals has quietly championed these principles. Today, the market is finally catching up.

+ Preventative wellbeing becoming mainstream
+ Luxury hospitality embracing holistic wellness
+ Ayurveda gaining global recognition
+ Ritual replacing routine
+ Authenticity valued over marketing
+ Global demand for meaningful wellbeing
+ Mauli brand equity + customer loyalty

THE GROWTH OPPORTUNITY

Global Wellness Economy - $6.8 trillion

The global wellness economy reached a record $6.8 trillion in 2024 and is forecast to reach almost $10 trillion by 2029. Wellness is s now larger than tourism, sports and the green economy.

Healthy Ageing $2.1 billon

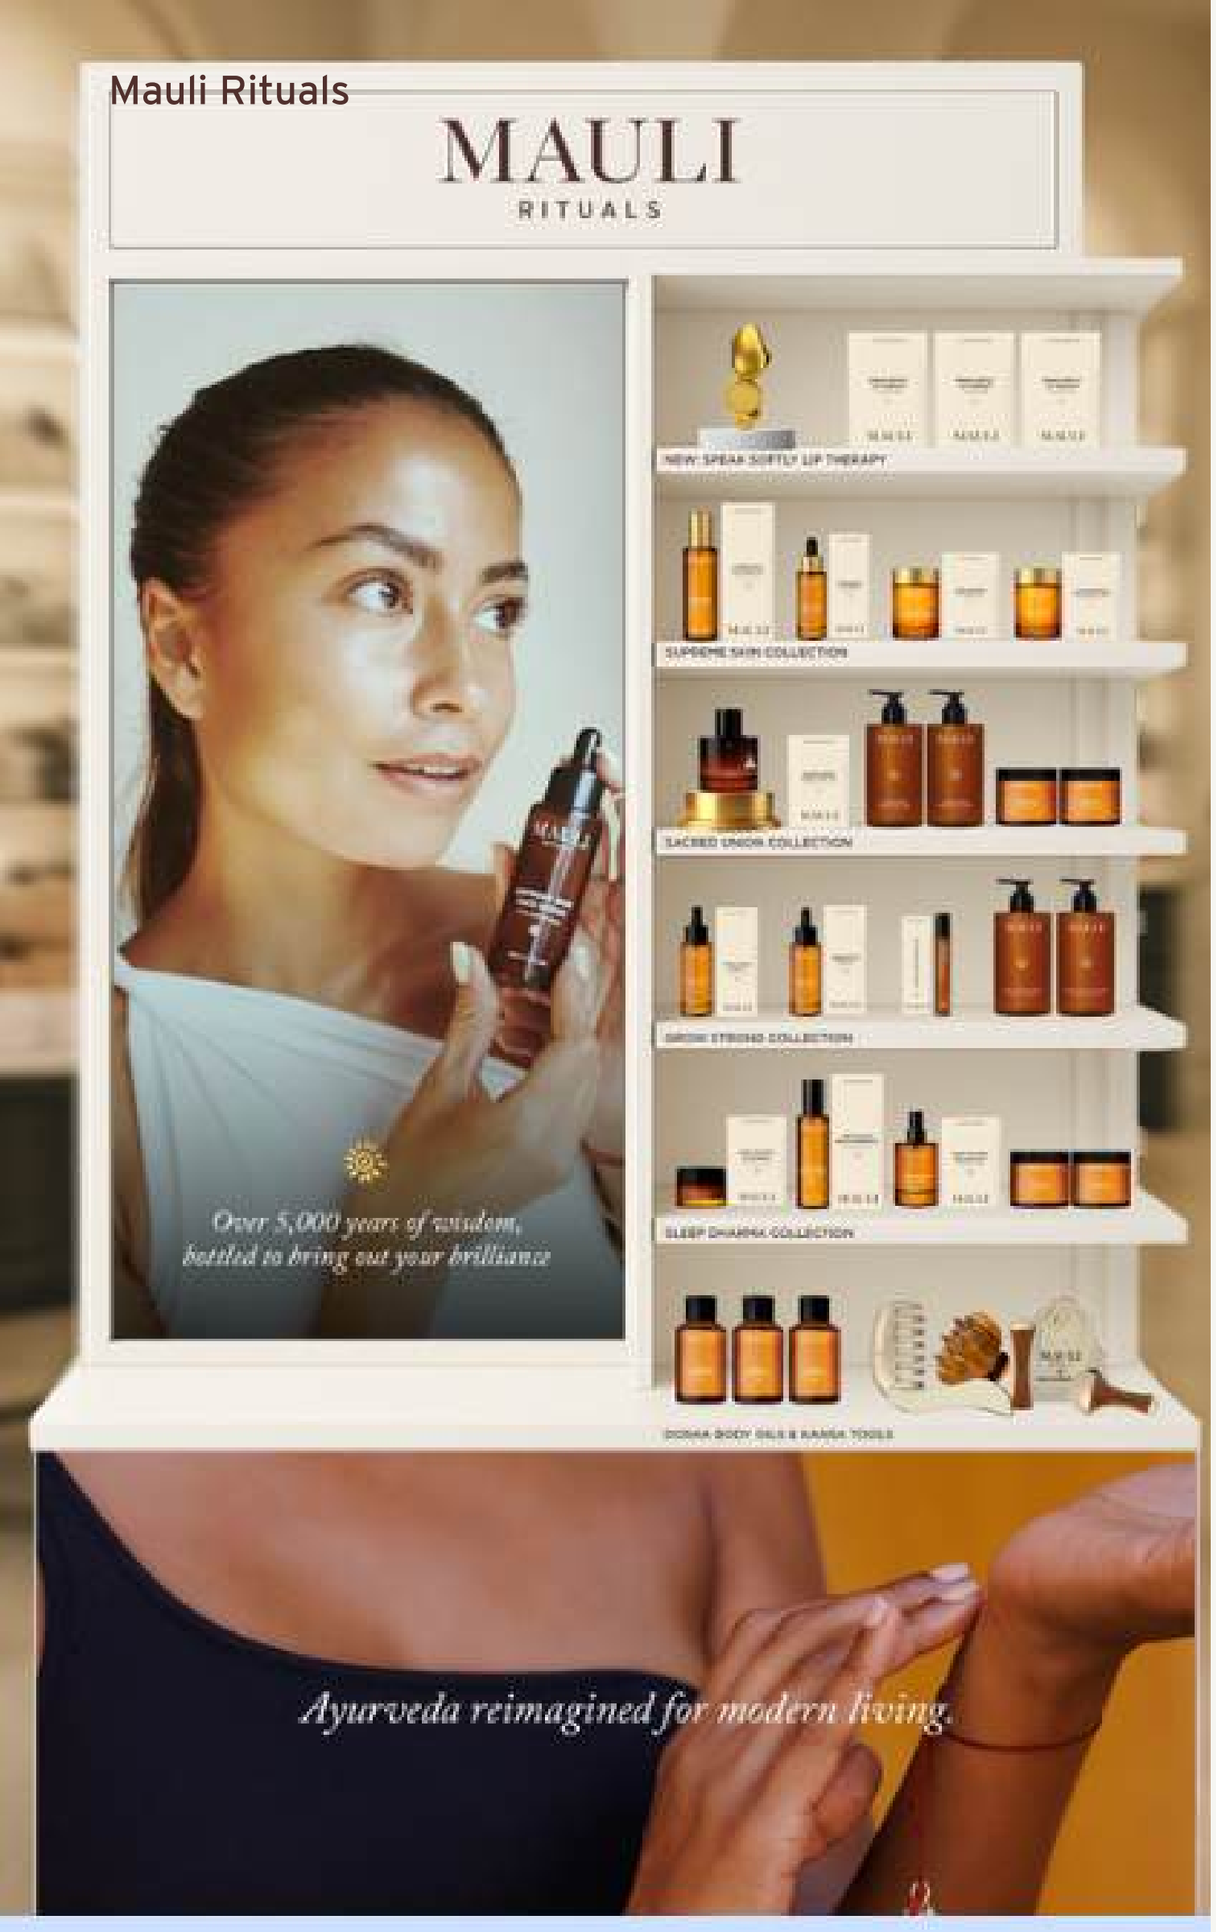

By 2050, one in five people globally will be over 60. Consumers are investing in longevity, vitality and quality of life—not simply living longer, but living better

Ayurveda goes global - 19.7% CAGR

Grooming > The Basics Of Ayurveda

The Basies Of Ayurveda

By Anita Kaushal

Ayurveda might be trending, but its power runs thousands of years deeper. Here, Mauli Rituals' founder Anita Kaushal explains the practice and guides us through understanding our doshas.

In a world of quick fixes, endless trends and airbrushed faces, it's all too easy to lose sight of our innate wisdom and unique beauty. Growing up in the 90s, my mother would oil massage my hair for strength and shine, give me smoked almonds for brain power, ferried seeds to soothe period pains, and turmeric milk for a good night's sleep. It was all lovely — but I was drawn instead to Johnny Bleach for my facial hair, scrimpers to wore my locks, vibrating plates to tone my body, SlimPlus shakes, and the cabbage diet for weight loss. My futile attempts left me feeling ever more out of place, dejected and ugly.

When my own children were born, I knew the way I had treated my body wasn't what I wanted for them. I was drawn back to my mother's nurturing rituals and to the beauty of Ayurveda — which even has a word for violent acts against the body and mind: Prajnaparadha, meaning actions that are sometimes deliberate and at other times stem from a lack of awareness.

But what is Ayurveda, you may be wondering? Ayurveda is a 5,000-year-old healing system from India, increasingly supported by modern scientific studies on wellbeing and longevity. Translating to "the science of living", Ayurveda is profound in its simplicity and offers a way to live in harmony with our true nature, rather than forcing ourselves to meet society's ideals of perfection.

What I appreciate most is how Ayurveda recognises the interconnectedness of all things. Our bodies are a microcosm of nature — just as some plants are dry and others lush, some thrive in sunshine while others prefer shade, we too have unique elemental make-ups suited to different diets and lifestyles. The starting point for discovering your mind-body type lies in the knowledge of "doshas".

The word "dosha" literally translates to "fault" — or more accurately, an imbalance of body and mind. Understanding your individual mind-body type unlocks insight into the foods, self-care rituals, exercise, meditation and breathing techniques that will help bring you back into balance. At times, you become so attuned to your own discomfort that you can't actively know how to course-correct in ways that feel safe — and with that, balance is restored.

Fundamentally, we are microcosms of nature, made up of the elements Air, Ether, Fire, Water and Earth. What differs between us as individuals is the degree to which these elements govern our physical and emotional wellbeing.

The first of the three mind- body types is "Vata", which has the qualities of Air and Ether. Within the body, Vata governs movement and all sensory functions. Those of a Vata dominant nature tend to be highly creative. They walk, talk, think, spend and act quickly. They're fast learners, but can grow bored easily, and are just as quick to forget. Given the nature of Air and Ether, they often have prominent joints, dry hair and skin, asymmetrical features, and cold extremities.

When in balance, they're the life and soul of any room; when out of balance, they can become anxious, forgetful and find it difficult to sleep. What Vatas need most are warm, nourishing foods and oils, gentle walks, meditation to calm the mind, and, perhaps most importantly, routine. While Vata types may resist routine, it's the very thing that grounds and stabilises them. If nothing else, it's key to bookend their days in the same way.

Next, we have "Pitta" dosha, which is made up of Fire and Water. A simple way to understand the dosha is through metaphor: fire is sharp and penetrating, it spreads fast and builds heat. The Pitta function in the body governs chemical transformations related to digestion, metabolism and the assimilation of energy — both physically and emotionally.

Physically, Pittas often have piercing features, strong, athletic builds, radiant skin and straight or fine hair. Mentally, they're ambitious, intelligent and intense — they make natural leaders who achieve great success.

When balanced, Pitta types enjoy excellent digestion, strong metabolism and deep, restorative sleep (albeit in short bursts). When imbalanced, however, they can become impatient, irritable, dominant or cynical. They develop an aversion to heat, and symptoms may include rash, sensitivity, excessive perspiration, rashes, ulcers, high blood pressure, acidity and burning eyes.

MAULI RITUALS

Mauli Rituals approaches wellbeing as daily emotional and physical repair, drawing on Ayurvedic lineage and generational knowledge. Created by Anita and Bittu Kaushal, the brand formulates high-performance blends to soothe stress, anxiety, fatigue, and imbalance. With more than sixty awards and a philosophy rooted in devotion, Mauli Rituals translates heritage into contemporary routines for skin, digestion, and emotional grounding.

"My night-time ritual is long and delicious," says Anita Kaushal, founder and creative director of Mauli Rituals. "It always begins with a bath or shower, as this signals washing the day away and drifting into my dream space unencumbered. I'll add my brand's Healing Salts and Shower Oil to make it more effective and enjoyable. Then I sip chamomile tea, apply Caroline Hirons' Retinol Cream and focus on a foot massage (which benefits the entire body), along with oral care – the "South Asian-owned beauty brands are finally having an industry boom. Here are the ones to buy now and support always"

Mauli Reawaken Himalayan Hand and Body Scrub

After visiting India, husband and wife team Bittu and Anita Kaushal rediscovered its rich holistic traditions. Anita went on to study Ayurvedic health and Bittu learned about the practice from his father, an Ayurvedic doctor. They both used their knowledge to create Mauli Rituals, a brand dedicated to fusing beauty and wellness into nourishing formulas for body and mind.

We recommend: Mauli Reawaken Himalayan Hand and Body Scrub, £58. This exfoliator is packed with Himalayan salts that buff away dead skin. But don't worry, it won't leave your skin irritated, as it also contains coconut, sweet almond and argan oils to keep skin smooth and supple.

Cultural appropriation vs cultural appreciation

So where is the line between cultural appropriation and cultural appreciation? Haria has relaxed her stance on this over time. "Five years ago, I probably would have gotten angry about all of it," she says. "Now, I find cultural appreciation nice – where someone likes elements of a culture and takes the time to understand them. If you get henna that's going to be there for 10 days, that's appreciation. If you're not making money from it, if you're getting it done because you really like it, that's not appropriation – in my opinion."
